DISTINCTION: Both shrinking and expanding are functions of advanced skill building.

NOTES: Both are related to non-linear dimensions – that is, the ability to engage in conscious, intentional group work. Working together in configurations, either permanent ones like bands, or temporary ones like groups who are travelling for any period of time or purpose, is a very specific aspect of advanced work.

But the opportunity to practice in this way shows up all the time in our lives, whenever we are working together: community, tasks, child raising, offering hospitality for an event, art music or publishing projects, and chores like washing dishes together. It's our casual, socially oriented, or self-important and righteous stance that prevents group alchemy from catching fire.

Most of the time that boils down to very unglamorous, nut and bolts kinds of things: being responsible for ourselves and staying connected when we are walking down the street in a group.
